

Artist Statement

“I found myself drawn to the social realists and became interested in Hogarth’s social allegories, Goya’s “Disasters of War” as well as Diane Victor’s “Disasters of Peace”. Encouraged by my patron Clive H. Viveiros, and my teachers, I was urged to find subjects that were more familiar and hopeful in their outlook. Thereafter I began to etch poignant compositions based on what I saw in my local community. My figures, drawn from photographs I had taken, show how families survive in poverty. My subsequent themes, based loosely on the experiences of my mother, led to a series concerning single mothers as heads of their households. Many of my prints depict mothers as the central and most elevated figure in my compositions, conveying the message that despite hardship and unemployment, women still manage to find ways to feed their families, nurture and protect their children and keep their families in relative security. I became the head of a household of women when my father left the family. I grew up in a culture of alcoholism, amidst the breakdown of my own family structure. Many of the men in my community spent their time and income drinking in shebeens. In a more recent body of work my focus shifted to migrant communities.”

Biography

Bambolwami Sibiyi was born in KwaThema, Springs, near Johannesburg. Sibiyi interned as the assistant gallery curator for the APS Gallery during his third and fourth year. Sibiyi gained experience in handling the artwork of professional artists during the internship. Sibiyi worked on the large-scale linocuts of several leading artists such as William Kentridge, Diane Victor, Norman Catherine and Colbert Mashile. Sibiyi was moved by the scale and depth of these weeks to such an extent that he extended his own work on a larger scale as he tackled more ambitious images with added confidence.

Education

During his high school years he trained at Mbira School of Music and Art under the late Paul Madi Phala, who recommended that he should apply to Artist Proof Studio (APS) to attend printmaking classes in the Saturday programme while continuing to support himself. When he completed his schooling, he attended Benoni Technical College and studied graphic design and art. His determination to succeed and his natural talent convinced Lucas Ngweng, a teacher at APS, to recommend him as a full-time student, where Sibiya caught “the printmaking bug”. In 2008 he was offered a full bursary to enter his second year as a full-time student. While he was always a strong draftsman, in his second year at APS his work started showing social content and engagement with his community. As a student he was encouraged to develop his own voice through cultural and art-historical research and by participating in social advocacy programmes.

Art Competitions

Bambo Sibiya has fared exceptionally well in various art competitions over the years. In 2008 he was a finalist in the Ekurhuleni Art Award. In 2009, Sibiya won the ‘top student of the year’ award at Artist Proof Studio and he was a semifinalist in the Thami Mnyele Awards. In 2010 Sibiya received the Merit Award at Thami Mnyele Awards for the ‘art on paper’ category, receiving a Merit Award. In 2011 he was in the top ten nominees for this award. In 2012 he was a finalist in the Absa L’Atelier awards and the winner of the prestigious Gerard Sekoto Award, which provided him with a three-month residency at the Cité Internationale des Arts in Paris in 2013. In 2012 he was recognized by the Arts and Culture Trust (ACT) awards for the most promising visual artist for 2012, an award given to him by the Johannesburg art community.
